Two hort companies, aeroponic irrigation technology company LettUs Grow Ltd. and horticulture design company KG Systems, announced a global distribution partnership at Indoor Ag-Con in March.

“Collaborating with KG Systems represents another pivotal development in our mission to redefine indoor agriculture worldwide,” said Charlie Guy, CEO of LettUs Grow, in a media release about the deal. “KG Systems’ extensive network and exemplary operational practices will enhance our capability to distribute our Advanced Aeroponics technology and Aeroponic Rolling Bench products to growers worldwide.

“This strategic partnership intends to establish new industrial standards for advanced irrigation in both greenhouses and vertical farms and substantially improve productivity across the indoor growing sector.”

LettUS Grow is a UK company, while KG Systems is based in the Netherlands.
