Post Office Putting Its Stamp on Pollinators

Jennifer Polanz

The U.S. Postal Service is helping to raise awareness about the importance of pollinators by releasing collectors' stamps showing hard-working bees and butterflies at work. The new stamps were released at the beginning of August as Forever stamps, which means they're always equal in value to the First-Class Mail, 1-oz. price. Visit www.USPS.com and click "Buy Stamps" to see all the images. GP
